Detailed Office Action

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to Claims 1-10 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-10

3. Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being obvious over Fischer et al. (6,349,004; "Fischer") in view of Geist (2003/0030597; "Geist") and further in view of Fantone et al. (4,784,118; "Fantone")

Art Unit: 2883

Regarding Claims 1-10, Fischer teaches a head-mounted electronic display comprising a device with the elements and functionality commonly associated with the light-funneling elements and functionality of a light pipe device, the light pipe device comprising an entry surface [25], an aspherical exit surface [26] defining an inflection point, and kinoform-type diffractive components. (See Fischer, Abstract, col. 2, ll. 25-41; col. 7, ll. 60-67; and col. 8, ll. 1-18)

Further regarding Claims 1-10, Fischer does not explicitly teach a light pipe configured to transmit virtual images to be experienced by the eye of a user wearing spectacles upon whose frame the electronic display is mounted. However, Geist teaches an electronic display arrangement comprising a conventional spectacle frame [15], an inclined reflection wall [68]; and negative diopter optical components which determine optical axis [15] and virtual image plane [10]. (See Geist, figs. 1, 5, and 6; and par. [0034], ll. 1- 9 and par. [0059], l. 1 - par. [0061], l. 17) Since Fischer and Geist both teach head-mounted optical display devices, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Fischer to have optic configuration taught by Geist because the resultant configuration would provide the user with simultaneous views of a virtual image and a forward field of view. (See Geist, Abstract, ll. 1-7) One would have been motivated to make this modification because the ability to integrate virtual images with forward-looking vision increase the amount of visual information instantly available to users of head-mounted displays.

Further regarding Claims 1-10, Fischer in view of Geist does not explicitly a diffractive/lens component formed directly on and as part of the entry surface of a single-piece light pipe relay. However, Fantone teaches a single-piece light pipe incorporating light entry and light exit optical components. (See Fantone, Abstract) It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Fischer in view Geist to have the single-piece construction taught by Fantone because the resultant configuration would facilitate device fabrication. (See Fantone, col. 1, ll. 43-45) One would have been motivated to make this modification because facilitating device construction would lower fabrication costs.
